HISTORY

A beer licence was granted to James Vallence, the first proprietor of the Bridge Inn, in December 1867. He ran a beer shop at his house in Maddingley Flat. In 1872 following his successful application for a publicans licence he built a six roomed hotel of "brick and plaster" on the current site. In 1886 a second storey and balcony was erected to capitalise on the new railway link that was opened to Melbourne in 1887.

The hotel was known for good accommodation, clean beds and stabling. Travellers were catered for and Carlton Ale and Victorian Bitter on draught. The motto was cleanliness, attention and civility.

Following an extensive fire in 1909, the balcony was removed.

The hotel became known as Stoney's Bridge Inn under long term licensee, William Stone. Today the hotel is simply known as Stoney's.

Stoney's became a part of the Pegasus Leisure Group which is owned by the Melbourne Racing Club in 2007.
